Transferable production:
Commit & branches Project X

Why?

I created a repoistory for my Project X to keep my development organized and structured.

How?

I followed a similar workflow that I've used for the other projects by making different branches for different parts. So I made one for the homepage and a different one for the booking system and regularly pushed significant changes there.

What?

I worked on these branches independently to keep work separate to stay structured and merged them to the main once they were finished.

So?

It has helped me to work in a structured way and kept finished and unfinished code separate.
